

About: The documentary team is responsible for documenting the project life cycle including what is said at meetings, short interview questions of (who), and (why) they are participating in the project. Also, documenting skill building classes, and of the general build of the tiny house project.

General Meeting #3: The documenting group took headshots and videos that asked participants who they are and what they are looking to learn from the project. We came up with ideas of producing a 20 min video to tell the story of the project from the beginning to the end. Also we created a plan on promoting Facebook live videos during our workshops to create more exposure.

FAQ

Q: Do you need your own equipment?

A: Yes and no. It's your choice of bringing your own professional equipment. However, you are liable if your equipment breaks or gets lost. If you have a cellphone that takes pictures and records that would be useful as well. We can use it to record for social media and capture pictures for the events. Also, there's other tasks given to members in our group that doesn't involve using equipment.

Q: Where can I store all my documents?

A: RPGA Studio has a dropbox account where you can store the documentation files. At the end of the day your team leader darius@regoparkgreenalliance.org will send you a link to the dropbox or a google drive where you can transfer your files.

Q: How is the work divided?

A: So each member will have one task that they will focus on at each meet-up. It's very important to focus on that one task so we can achieve the best quality and results. Roles will change for each meet up so each member can get a diverse understanding of each role in our group.

Q: Is this a easy group?

A: This group shouldn't be known as a easy group. Each group has an important task they must accomplish and it's our job record all of it. It's up to us to promote this project and make it as memorable as possible.

Q: Will the tiny house be outdoors?

A: Yes, the tiny house will be outdoors. The build will also take place outdoors. Currently, it will be built and housed at knockdown center.

Q: What are our tasks?

A: Our main tasks is to record footage, take pictures, and create notes of the events that are taking place at the workshops. Also to share information with other groups that we have captured and understanding their roles and tasks they have completed.
